Worst S.S.F. Fire Ever; Mother, 3 Daughters Die

By FRANK LaPIERRE

A 28-year-old South San Francisco mother, trying in vain to rescue three daughters from a roaring fire that swept through her townhouse Thursday, perished in the flames along with the daughters.

It was the worst fire involving the loss of life in the history of South San Francisco, a fire department spokesman said.

Another daughter, Tracy, 13, managed to crawl to a second story window and jump.

She suffered a fractured skull and is reported to be in stable condition today at Kaiser Hospital in South San Francisco.

Cause of the blaze that claimed the lives of Mrs. Elaine Nalivka, who was seven months pregnant, and her young daughters; Kelly, 12, Laurie, 7, and Robin 2, is still under investigation by fire officials.

Mrs. Nalivka was talking with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sidney Stump, on a kitchen telephone, when she suddenly exclaimed "Oh, my God, there's a fire" and hung up, according to San Mateo County Coroner's Investigator Robert Cole.

The victim's brother-in-law rushed to the scene, it was learned.

Investigators are focusing their attention on the possibility the blaze started either in a Christmas tree or a faulty television set.

It was learned from a neighbor the electric lights on the Nalivka tree shorted out earlier this week.

But investigators still are unable to determine why the fire raced so fast through the modest two story, stucco-frame townhouse at 2448 Williamsburg Court in the Westborough section of the city.

David Nalivka, father of the dead girls, was told of the tragedy at work as a cook at the Canlis Restaurant in the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco.

He was taken to Kaiser Hospital after collapsing at the scene.

Two of the girls' bodies were found in their respective bedrooms on the second floor, while Mrs. Nalivka and a daughter were recovered from the kitchen area on the first floor, firemen said.

The fire was so hot on arrival of firemen that it took about 15 minutes to knock the flames down and allow rescuers to enter the charred ruins.

Neighbor, Carlos Mancilla, said Mrs. Nalivka came to his door about 7 p.m., asking how to operate a small fire extinguisher.

Both he and the fire victim ran back to the home.

When he saw the extent of the blaze, Mancilla rushed back to his own home and grabbed a garden hose in an attempt to bring the fire under control.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Nalivka ran into the flames to rescue her children.

She never came out again.

Critics said the South San Francisco fire department took 10 minutes to respond to the fire.

"Not true. There is no substance to that charge," a fire department spokesman told The Times today.

He said electronic timekeeping devices proved it took the Westborough station only one minute to arrive at the scene from the time they left the station. And about six and a half minutes for other equipment to get into service at the fire scene from the main downtown station.

The fact is, according to the spokesman, firemen left the Westborough station before an alarm was received.

Officials Deny Blame

By JACK BIK

South San Francisco city officials denied Friday that any city agency was at fault in a fire that killed a mother and three children.

The denial followed an investigation carried out by Mayor Terry Mirri, vice-mayor Dick Battaglia, City Manager Ed Alario, Fire Chief Lawrence Toellner and Zoning Administrator Bill Costanza.

They acted in the wake of allegations, mainly carried on radio and television stations, that firemen were 10 to 20 minutes late at arriving at the fire, and that the townhouse that burned — a near-duplicate of hundreds recently erected and now under construction — was dangerous.

Meanwhile, Tracy Nalivka, 13, who escaped the fire by leaping from a second-story window onto a concrete patio was reported by Kaiser Hospital today to be in "stable condition." She is still in the intensive care unit.

Her mother, Elaine Nalivka, 28, who was seven months pregnant, and three sisters, Robyn, 2, Laurie, 7, and Kelly, 12, died in the flames.

The investigation into the cause of the fire is still in progress. Chief Toellner said today that by elimination of other causes, chances were 75 per cent that the cause was a shorted-out Christmas tree cord. The lights had a short circuit on Christmas Day but they went back on again, and the Nalivkas evidently overlooked the incident.

Fire Departments Sign Automatic Aid Pact

The South San Francisco and Daly City Fire Departments have entered into a reciprocal automatic aid program on a trial basis. During the trial period, a continuing analysis will be conducted to evaluate the effectiveness of the program, officials announced.

The main objective of the program is to provide quicker response to those areas in both cities that are contiguous by dispatching the nearest available fire fighting unit to the scene of the emergency. Additionally, it provides an advantage of having another Engine Company available for back-up to the fire, or availability for a second fire should occur.

Automatic Aid is an extension of Mutual Aid, a program that has existed in the State of California for many years under the California State Fire and Disaster Plan. Mutual Aid in San Mateo County is recognized as one of the finest, both organizationally and operationally. Mutual Aid is dispatched to any city requesting assistance by the Mutual Aid Coordinator for San Mateo County, Chief John W. Keller, Redwood City Fire Department, through Redwood Fire Control. It provides assistance on request to any city not having the resources to control an emergency situation alone. Under Automatic Aid, assistance is provided by adjacent cities to contiguous areas automatically. It simply is Mutual Aid, automatically, it was explained.

The areas affected by the South San Francisco-Daly City program are; South San Francisco — The area generally known as West Park 1 and 2, West Park 3, Westborough Square and the area adjacent thereto through to King Drive. The area is bounded by Skyline Boulevard, Westborough Boulevard, King Drive and Junipero Boulevard. The area also includes those areas known as Winston Manor 1, 2, and 3. Daly City — The area generally known as Serramonte. The area is bounded by Hickey Boulevard, Junipero Serra Boulevard, King Drive and Skyline Boulevard.

Under the Automatic Aid program, response by either fire department involves only box alarms or known structural fires where a full first alarm assignment (normally 2 Engine Companies, 1 Truck Company, and a Battalion Chief) is dispatched, and only as the second due company. If at any time the second due Company is not available, total response to the incident reverts to the jurisdiction in which the incident occurs, officials said.

Command of the fire, and response to all incidents requiring only a single company, remains the responsibility of the jurisdiction in which the incident occurs.

Dispatch of either Daly City or South San Francisco units will be by micro wave telephone as the primary system, and the mutual aid radio frequency as back-up. All radio communications between units at the scene and the communication center will be on the mutual aid frequency.

During the past several weeks, personnel from both departments have visited each other's response area, studied fire apparatus and equipment.

Both Chief H. Keith Schrock of Daly City and Chief Lawrence A. Toellner of South San Francisco have expressed optimism that the program will prove "extremely beneficial" to both cities.

Vol. 29, No. 1 | DELIVERED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING | WEDNESDAY, JAN. 1, 1975

Mayor Stewart's Harsh Warning

Bus Dispute Still Boiling

The transit picture in Daly City daily becomes darker the City Council was told at a meeting Dec. 23.

Some residents of the community appeared before the council to air their complaints regarding poor service and unkept schedules on Northgate Transit Company routes throughout the city.

A dispute between franchise holder Northgate and a new company — Daly City Transit Systems, Inc. — formed by dissident drivers has been boiling for more than three weeks.

The State Public Utilities Company and San Mateo County Superior Court are studying the issue.

Meanwhile, the PUC has leaned in favor of Northgate, whom they issued a permit to some 10 years ago.

And the Superior Court has issued a cease and desist order to the Daly City Transit Systems company ordering them not to operate on any Northgate routes.

Led by Mateo Mattheus, a San Pablo transit consultant, the drivers who broke away from Northgate turned to the Daly City council Dec. 23 for support in their fight to oust Northgate from the city.

Mattheus charged Northgate is operating in violation of laws governing corporations, pointing out they had been suspended by the state.

(Earlier, a spokesman for Northgate said Northgate had failed to fulfill its obligation to the State Franchise Board and had been on temporary suspension. The Corporation has since paid the tax and has been reinstated.)

What the council wants is for Northgate and the new company to sit down and discuss the issue "for the good of all our citizens."

"Daly City Transit stands ready to supply you with buses . . . the whole kit and kaboodle (some 20 vehicles and drivers) is ready to operate at any time," Mattheus said.

But the council refused to show partiality in the matter, adhering to City Attorney Albert Polonsky's opinion that a "hands off" stand be maintained until the courts ruled in the issue.

Polonsky was not present at the Monday meeting.

Instead, he left his opinion in the hands of City Manager David Rowe and an associate.

Councilman Tony Giammona pointed out that the courts in hearing the case last week had recommended both sides sit down and work the matter out.

"I think that's pretty good advice," Giammona said.

Mattheus said "We're ready to talk (to Northgate) if we can find someone to talk to."

Another councilman unwilling to act in this issue — at least for the present — was attorney and former judge Paul Hupf.

"I want a lot more information than has thus far been brought before the council," Hupf told Mattheus.

Hupf later said if another city permit is issued, there would be two companies operating in Daly City, compounding the problem of what to do when the times comes to implement a countywide system.

"We'd probably have to buy out both companies. And there's the possibility other transit companies would want to come into the city. It would become a real mess," he said.

If the PUC is satisfied in the matter "then it would be appropriate to bring this back before (the council)," Hupf said.

Northgate should give "every consideration" to the

Shots Fired at DC Center; Three Held

Shoppers at Serramonte Shopping Center in Daly City were startled last week to see a man chasing another man through the parking lot shooting at him.

Two shots were fired as a warning to halt by Daly City police Sgt. John Kolbman after a shoplifting suspect at the Macy's store in the center allegedly pulled a knife and tried to slash Kolbman.

The suspect fled the scene, but was later arrested, police said.

According to police reports, two brothers — Steve B. Beaman, 26, and Brett Beaman, 25, both of San Mateo — entered Macy's. Using a metal bar the pair allegedly broke a lock on a clothes rack and tried to walk out with two coats valued at more than $100.

Three security guards at the store, Kolbman, police officer Harry Lax and store detective Nancy Kelly, confronted the pair in an outside parking lot.

Police said Steve Beaman, of 400 Studio Drive, San Mateo, pulled a knife and slashed at Kolbman, before running off with the officer in hot pursuit.

As Beaman ran up a hill behind the center, Kolbman pulled his gun, shouted a warning and fired twice.

Both shots missed.

Kolbman was not injured in the scuffle, police said.

Brett Beaman, of 444 Grand Ave., San Mateo, was arrested on the spot and charged with burglary.

A woman companion, identified as Patti Lynn Pineda, 27, of 2280 Fleetwood Drive, San Mateo, also was arrested and charged with possession of stolen property, police said.

Investigation by police later resulted in the arrest of Steve Beaman, who was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and burglary.

Both Beamans are self employed furniture movers, police said.

SF Man Held for Car Theft

At the dead-end of First Avenue, Daly City, a low wall has a surprising 20 to 25-foot drop behind it.

Police used this bit of local knowledge Saturday morning to capture a man they have held in connection with the theft of a car in San Francisco.

Roy Edward Jacobsen, 20, San Francisco, was arraigned in Northern Judicial District Court Monday. He was held over the weekend at the Daly City Jail, in lieu of $1,000 bail.

Police said a man was spotted speeding in a car on Mission and East Market streets. As police gave chase, the fleeing vehicle drove around the block to the southern dead-end of First Avenue. The driver got out of the car and jumped over the wall.

Officers Robert Hyink and Peter Salvi were waiting behind the wall, and captured the man, but not before Jacobsen sprained his arm in the scuffle.

Police allege that the car, a 1963 Chevrolet, was stolen from Fulton Street in San Francisco.

Parents Charge 'Criticism' Led To Expulson of Collum Child

By FRANK LaPIERRE

Parents of two children attending San Mateo County's Child Development Center told the Times-Post today that they feel the ouster of 10-year-old Chuck Collum is due to his mother's outspoken criticism of the center's programs.

Mrs. Jackie Collum, of Pacifica, has been one of the district's most vehement critics regarding how the center has handled children attending classes in the Daly City school.

As a consequence of this criticism, other parents said, her son, a victim of the deadly "Batten's Disease," was terminated from the program in October.

Mrs. Collum has three children afflicted with the sickness, which has a degenerating effect on physical and mental capacities.

Shortly after Chuck was dismissed, Mrs. Collum visited the school and found a daughter, K.C., age 15, strapped in a chair wearing a football-type helmet.

School authoritieis justified their action because they feared K.C. would fall and hurt herself, it was explained.

Mrs. Collum pulled the child out of the school awaiting an explanation for the center's conduct.

A third child attends a Pacifica school and does not require special attention.

But parents of some of the children attending the center are unhappy with the programs offered.

Instead of attempting to "develop" a child, the center operates "more like a day care center," Mrs. Ann Kinny said.

"There just doesn't appear to be much enthusiasm for a development program," Mrs. Kinny said.

Concerned parents have continually pushed for more meaningful programs at the center since its inception about 1½ years ago, she said.

And while she is satisfied with the personal treatment of her own child by teachers, Mrs. Kinny feels the San Mateo County project is far behind those offered in Contra Costa, Marin and San Francisco.

She charged the children are doing nothing more than "lying around watching television," and that teachers are not really "working with the children in trying to develop their capabilities."

The philosophy of the center allegedly is to dismiss those children who do not meet the certain requirements, according to Mrs. Kinny.

Another parent, Mrs. Sandy Wester, said she felt the dismissal of Chuck was "a real threat to all other children" at the center.

"This program is for children who do not qualify for any other (school) programs," Mrs. Wester said.

She said she feels teachers "should work more with the children" and that all children "have a right to this program."

Mrs. Collum's outspoken attitude of the programs offered, and of those who run it, is responsible for Chuck's dismissal, Mrs. Wester said.

"A parent has a right to be emotional," Mrs. Kinny said. "I don't think (the authorities) handled Mrs. Collum in a professional manner."

But William Herbig, assistant superintendent for special education in San Mateo County, emphatically denied allegations Mrs. Collum's children had been singled out for retaliation.

JESD Will Repair School Buildings

The Jefferson Elementary School District received a favorable ruling recently that will allow it to use $70,000 from the sale of the Thornton School site to make some building and maintenance repairs at the district schools.

When the district decided to sell the property for $140,000 to the Jefferson Union High School District, it expected to use all of that sum for repairs of various district schools.

However, the State Department of General Services initially informed the elementary district that it would have to apply the entire $140,000 proceeds of the sale to reduce its outstanding loan balance.

Business Manager John Lynch, though, was able to convince the state agency that the district was a hardship case and won the ruling to retain half of the total.

In another matter at the board's recent meeting, it was announced that the district's second and third grade students scored above the state predicted range, according to the results of a recent state testing program

The results also showed that the district's sixth graders scored above the predicted range in spelling and within the range in reading, language and mathematics.

The California State Testing program evaluates school districts in relation to similar districts in grades two, three, six and 12. The predicted range is based on variables that consider the district's financial, community and pupil characteristics.

It was also recommended by Business Manager Lynch that the trustees approve a notice of completion, retain a standard 10 per cent fee from the total price and withhold the payment of $7,228.94 for liquidated damages in the Fernando Rivera relocation project.

Lynch wanted the latter payment withheld because the district was unsatisfied with the carpet installation.

The total amount of the contract was $320,158.82.

some other factors," Toellner said.

Friday's investigation included examination of tapes of all the telephone calls received by the communications center at the time of the fire.

The first call was received at 6:56 p.m. when the Westborough fire engine had already started to roll, after fireman Mike Robinson saw some smoke. The fire engine, with three men, reached the scene at 6:57 p.m.

Aslo at 6:57 p.m. a second call went out. The fire engine from the Buri Buri station arrived at 7:01 p.m.

Also at 6:56 p.m., the ladder truck began to roll from Central, some five miles away. It arrived at 7:04 p.m., in eight minutes. Another alarm was pulled at 7 p.m.

Within 11 minutes of the first call, Toellner said, there were four pieces of equipment at the fire and some 15 to 20 men fighting the fire. He himself was on the scene within minutes, since he resides three blocks away. Other off duty firemen converged from their homes.

However, the first firemen on the scene found the house fully enveloped — and the victims may already have been dead at the time. It was a half-hour before firemen could get into the house.

Costanza said that there was no fault in the construction of the home. The studs, the beams and other construction members were in sound condition, and the house, which suffered $30,000 damage, can still be repaired.

What had burned appeared to be the carpets, possibly the wallpaper, drapes, furniture and other contents. When Mrs. Nalivka ran to a neighbor to show her how to use the extinguisher, she left the front door open, which fanned the flames.

Toellner agreed that she should have taken the children out first, then called the firemen, and then tried to fight the fire.

"But none of us knows how he would react in an emergency," he said.

Costanza added that the fire actually demonstrated the fire-resistant character of the townhouses. Although it was build wall to wall with its two neighboring homes, no smoke or heat penetrated the neighbors. Two five-eights-inch layers of sheetrock, with air in between, separated each home, he said.

Toellner said that he lives in an identical home, with no fear. He admitted however, that the second-story bedrooms do have a lack of escape routes. "But Americans like second-story living," he said.

Fire Guts Apartments

An early morning fire today gutted two apartments and did $25,000 damage at 2400 Skyline Blvd., Pacifica, according to firemen.

Seven persons, including three children, managed to flee the apartments in time. Numerous residents of adjoining apartments were also evacuated during the fire.

Fire Capt. George Lobanoff reported that the lives of the Melvina Hill and Penny Wycoff, residents of the upper apartment were saved by their alarm clock going off at 5:15 a.m. By that time, their apartment was already filling with smoke.

Also residents of the apartment just below, Dorothy Harvey, her mother and child, and two youngsters visiting from out of town, escaped uninjured.

Although the cause of the fire has not been determined, and investigation is still in progress, firemen believe that the fire started in the furnace areas of the apartments, traveling from one furnace to the other.

Preliminary investigation shows that the fire started in the lower story furnace area, spread to the upper area and into the floor joist area.

drivers, many who own their vehicles. However, the council should not participate in what was labeled a "labor-management" dispute, Councilman William Schumacher said at the outset of the council meeting before some 80 persons attending.

Schumacher encouraged Northgate to give first priority to rehiring the ousted drivers "in the best interest of themselves and the people."

Phillip Rogers, of 7 Crestview, Daly City told the council "I'm getting hurt. I can ride BART to work and back, but I can't get a ride home at night."

Some persons are waiting upwards of an hour to get a bus ride "and when the bus does arrive it's too crowded to board," Rogers said.

Mayor McRobert Stewart, in the harshest statement of the night, said "If Northgate does not resolve it (their dispute) someone will resolve it for them."

The remark was interpreted as a warning that unless the matter is not settled soon, the city would step in.

Dancing at Bruno Bar Approved Over Protest

There'll be dancing at Newell's Bar, at least until February.

San Bruno City Council members last week upheld a recent Planning Commission approval of a conditional use permit allowing dancing at the establishment, while adding the condition that there can be juke box music only.

Resident Ray Hollingsworth, 482 Sylvan Ave., had appealed the Planning Commission approval. He and numerous other residents in the immediate area unsuccessfully protested the issuance before the council.

Although the bar has been located at that site for many years, there apparently had been no excessive problems with loud noises until about August, when new operator Andrew Stathis "experimented" with a live band.

Hollingsworth, who owns a nearby apartment house, said his tenants began complaining about loud music and other noise. According to Hollingsworth, when the back doors of the bar were left open nearby walls acted like a reverberation chamber with the noise from amplifiers.

One of the conditions of the use permit is that the rear door be closed (not locked) when music or dancing is in progress.

And Stathis claimed that the noise problem of which the residents were complaining already has been corrected.

"I have limited music to the juke box," said Stathis, a 43-year-old former policeman.

Action on the appeal was touch and go for a while as the four council members deadlocked, 2-2, twice; once on whether to deny the appeal and once on returning the matter to the Planning Commission.

The Dec. 16 resignation of George Corey created the unique voting situation in which there was no tie vote breaker.

Mayor Tony Governale and Councilwoman Marge Kozkowski wanted to uphold the Planning Commission decision and add the stipulation that there be no live music.

Councilmen John Barnard and Dick Griffin voted to deny the dance permit. Barnard changed his position after Mayor Governale explained that a deadlock would in effect uphold the Planning Commission, and by eliminating the live music the noise problem could be alleviated. He said dance permit or not the juke box would be allowed to play.

After February the use permit for dancing will be reviewed, and at that time it is to be determined whether there has been a reduction in the noise problem.

department) would stand for this and no one would take a whack at a parent because they criticized the program," Herbig said.

Herbig reiterated what he said earlier: That Chuck had "degenerated rapidly" in the past year and was unable to participate in classes.

Asked whether charges lodged by Mrs. Collum's supporters in the issue — that Chuck's ouster was illegal under state law — had any foundation, Herbig responded by noting AB 4040 "which is the (law) apparently being cited" that applies only to five areas in the state "and our district is not one of them."

Herbig's office had filed an application for funding under the law last year, but was denied.

He again will ask that the application be resubmitted this year, he said.

Assembly Bill (4040) IMPLENTS A MASTER PLAN for education of special children.

Mrs. Collum contends that under the law Chuck should remain in the program until his case has been reviewed by the County Board of Education in Redwood City.

(A hearing on the matter is scheduled for Jan. 16, at 8 p.m. in Redwood City.)

After battling the educational authorities for the past few months, how does Mrs. Collum feel?

"Tired, very tired. I'm not getting old, I'm just getting tired," the mother of three handicapped children, who lost a daughter to the disease five years ago, answered.

"We moved here with great hope . . . hope that it would be good for the kids. Now I've apparently got to move again to find a school for my children," Mrs. Collum said.

Narcotics Confiscated

San Mateo County Narcotic Unit officers capped a narcotics negotiation last week with the arrest of four persons on various charges ranging from possession and possession for sale of cocaine, marijuana and amphetamines.

Booked at county jail were Thomas Gonzales, 21, of 9 Maryland Place, San Bruno, where the arrests occurred; Robert Duran, 36, of San Francisco; Mike Kimbro, 29, of 367 Morton Drive, Daly City; and Sharon L. Hook, 19, of 469 Helen Drive, Millbrae.

According to Lt. Don Coslett, members of the narcotics unit Dec. 23 confiscated approximately 10 pounds of marijuana, half an ounce of cocaine a jar of amphetamines and seven tablets that appeared to be LSD.

The arrest followed several minor "buys" over the past week, according to Coslett. He said an arrangement had been made for the purchase at the San Bruno location involving Gonzales and the woman, and at the time of the meeting and "sales" Duran and Kimbro arrived with some of the "merchandise."

Commuters' Bad Morning

Rubbernecking motorists touched off a massive traffic slowup in the northbound lanes of Highway 280 in Daly City Monday morning.

A compact car caught fire on the side of the road about 7 a.m. during the usual morning traffic crush and burned out of control until arrival of Daly City firemen.

No one was injured. However, the car was destroyed, according to Fire Capt. Allen Brush.

Motorists going to work slowed down to watch the blaze, causing a stop and go traffic situation as far south as the Serramonte Shopping Center.

New Kindergarten Law Is Pondered

South San Francisco School District staff members are studying a new state law, going into effect Jan. 1, which would permit the school board to enroll children who reach the age of 5 at any time.

A child now must be 4 years 9 months of age by Sept 2 to be enrolled in kindergarten at the start of a school year. A child one day too young must wait a year to enroll.

Staff members have many questions about the law. The main one is: What do you do with children after they complete their first half-year of enrollment, since they will always be younger than others in their grade?

With South San Francisco's academic kindergarten program, there would be the problem of catching up on reading and arithmetic, as well as a social adjustment, educators there say.

One proposal is to begin new kindergarten classes at the start of the new semester, in late January, then enroll the children in summer school. Whether or not this would require additional personnel who would work just a half-year, is unknown.

Asst. Supt. Tom Gaffney said that the results of the current study probably will be submitted to the board in January.

At this time, he said, he has not seen the law.

Gaffney said if such a program is adopted, it might be operated in conjunction with the district's early Children Education Program, now in three district schools, and to be extended to two others next year.

San Bruno Park Supt. Bill Jennings and Laguna Salada Asst. Supt. Marvin Morganti said their districts have no plans to change their present policy of admission — at least not for the coming year.

Additional Jobless Benefits Available

Unemployed workers who may be eligible for benefit payments under legislation signed Dec. 20 by President Ford should note that the first day when applications will be taken is Jan. 6.

This is the message from California's Employment Development Department.

Two bills were signed, one providing extra benefits to insured claimants, the other providing benefits to other jobless workers not eligible under the insurance program. The kick-off date for applying under either program is Jan. 6.

One bill, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act, provides up to 13 weeks of additional unemployment insurance payments, making possible a maximum of 52 weeks' payments to an insured jobseeker. The weekly benefit, ranging from $25 to $90, and the number of weeks benefits can be paid depend on the previous earnings of the claimant.

The other bill, the Emergency Jobs and Unemployment Assistance Act, provides for similar benefit payments, up to a maximum of 26 weeks, to unemployed workers not covered by the insurance program. For the most part, these would be agricultural workers, employees of state and local government and domestics.

Rich Camilli, director of the state's Employment Development Department, which will handle the applications through its unemployment insurance field offices, says the state is preparing to meet an initial surge of 150,000 to 200,000 applicants in the first week. This will be in addition to the 385,000 jobless workers now getting payments.

"We don't expect too many new problems in processing the extra benefits for the insured claimants, but we realize that the benefits for formerly uncovered workers will involve a tremendous increase in workload," he said.

"An insured claimant's work history and earnings will be fairly easy to check, because we have those records. But workers with uninsured employment who will be claiming under the new program should bring their records of earnings, employers' names and addresses, social security card number and other documentary evidence to help establish a valid claim," Camilli added.

"These claims will be handled just as fast as possible, but it will take time to process and prepare them for payment," Camilli added.

"However, our people will take every possible step to gear up for this monumental task by recalling temporary workers with claims experience, by opening for business earlier or closing later, by using staff from other programs to help, and generally to make the prompt payment of benefits our first priority."

SSF Planner Fired; Hearing Scheduled

The South San Francisco Personnel Board will review the firing of Asst. City Planner Surendra Amin Jan. 6.

The review will be open to the public.

Neither Amin, nor the city, were willing to discuss details of the firing, for fear, they said, of prejudicing the case. In addition, Amin said he did not believe it proper to discuss the subject while still an employe.

Amin will be represented at the hearing by John Gay, of the Marine Engineering Beneficial Association union, which represents many city employes.

"Basically, we believe that Mr. Amin's termination was not proper," Gay said. "We are prepared to present evidence to that effect."

Amin has been employed by the city three years. He was originally employed under the federally-funded Emergency Employment Act as a planning technician.

When former City Planner Dan Pass and his assistant, Bill Thimons, left the city, Surendra was hired as assistant planner. He served at times as head of the planning division while part-time consultant, Neil Martin, was off duty. During most of this year, he has served as assistant to new city planner, David C. Hale.

Amin's one-year probationary term was coming to an end when City Manager Ed Alario gave him notice of termination, as of Dec. 26.

New PT&T Executives Appointed

Directors of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company Dec. 20 named Jerome W. Hull and Gordon L. Hough, both of Hillsborough, to the top positions in the company.

Hull, 62, who has been president of the company since 1968, will become chairman of the board of directors.

Executive Vice President Gordon L. Hough, 55, will take over the duties of president.

A graduate of Occidental College, Hull joined the Bell System in 1935 as an engineering clerk in Los Angeles. He advanced through a number of commercial department assignments in Southern and Northern California. He served in two assignments at the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York, 1951-1954, and 1958-1959.

He was elected vice president and general manager of the company's Northern Counties Area in 1960, vice president-operations in 1962, executive vice president in 1966 and president in 1968.

Hull is a trustee of Occidental College and a member of the Board of Regents at the University of San Francisco.

In addition to serving as a director of Pacific Telephone and Nevada Bell, Hull is a director of Pacific Southwest Airlines; Crocker National Bank; Di Giorgio Corporation; New York Life Insurance Company; the San Francisco Opera Association, and the California State Chamber of Commerce.

In addition, he is vice chairman of the San Francisco Bay Area Council, chairman of the California State Chamber Statewide Public Affairs Committee, and general chairman of St. Luke's Hospital Building-Fund Drive.

Hough, is a veteran of 26 years with the Bell System. He joined Pacific Telephone as a traffic department student shortly after receiving his Master's Degree from Stanford University, where he also spent his undergraduate years.

He served in a variety of traffic department posts in both Southern and Northern California prior to being elected vice president and general manager of Pacific Telephone's Los Angeles Central Area in 1964, and then vice-president-Southern California in 1966.

He joined American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York as director-public relations in 1969 and returned to Pacific Telephone as vice president-administration in 1971. He was elected executive vice president of the company in 1972.

In addition to being a director of Pacific Telephone and Nevada Bell, Hough is a director of Ameron, Inc.; United California Bank; Pacific American Income Shares, Inc.; Greater San Francisco Chamber of Commerce and American Defense Preparedness Association.

'Drug Addict' Robs Bank

The clerk at Lloyd's Bank, Westborough Shopping Center in South San Francisco, looked at a note presented by a man, at 12:55 p.m. Friday.

It began: "I am a drug addict."

The man kept his hand in his jacket pocket, which looked like it might have contained a weapon. The man ordered the clerk to give him all the cash.

The robber left on foot, where he was somehow lost in the post-Christmas crowds. The bank is trying to determine its loss by an audit.

South San Francisco police have issued an appeal to any shoppers on the scene who may have noticed the suspect or his car to call the department. The suspect is described as black, 30 to 35 years old, five-feet eight, 230-240 pounds, and wearing a green and brown jacket and tight green slacks.

Gregorio Reintroduces One-House Legislature

Senator Arlen Gregorio (D-San Mateo) has reintroduced his measure to establish a one-house (unicameral) legislature in California.

The proposal, SCA 10, calls for a 99-member legislature in a single-house which would replace the current Senate and Assembly.

Last year a similar measure by Gregorio, SCA 32, was killed in the Senate Rules Committee. It was supported by former Governor Edmund G. Brown, former Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh, and former Senate President Pro Tem Hugh Burns.

Gregorio said a unicameral legislature would be considerably less expensive to operate and more effective than the current two-house legislature.

"A simplified, consolidated legislature would be much more visible and accessible to the public, whose voice is not often heard in Sacramento," he said.

"Moft important, legislators would represent smaller districts than they do now. They could have more contact with their constituents, and could wage personal, face-to-face campaigns, without having to rely on special interest campaign funds to get their points of view across to the voters."

Panel Set to Study County Ambulance Calls Procedures

Formation of a five-member advisory committee to assist the county in establishing ambulance service policies was approved recently last week by the County Board of Supervisors.

The advisory committee was recommended by Presiding Superior Court Judge Robert D. Miller after suit was filed against the county by California Ambulance Service when the Board of Supervisors declined the firm's request to get first call preference on calls in San Carlos.

County Manager M. D. Tarshes reported to the board that the ambulance company's attorney, Melvin Kerwin, has concurred with the judge's recommendation and with the naming of four members of the committee who will then appoint the fifth member.

Named to the committee are Raymond S. Lelli, executive director of the San Mateo County Bar Association; George Asvos, Redwood City fire marshal; Frank E. Hold, emergency services coordinator for Santa Clara County, and Dr. Lee Farr, retired chief of the Bureau of Emergency Services for the State Department of Health.

Comments On 'Fill' Requested

The Army Corps of Engineers has set a Jan. 16 deadline for comments on an application by Arthur "Buzz" Haskins of South San Francisco to dump a half-million cubic yards of fill onto previously submerged Bay lands.

The project involves 55 acres on which filling operations had been started in 1963, and was thus exempt from jurisdiction of the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

However, Haskins needs approval from both the Army and from the Regional Water Quality Control Board. The Corps has determined that since no heretofore-unfilled area would be affected, and that the land — destined for industrial development — is already in an industrial area, and it would be impractical to restore the area to its natural state, no Environmental Impact Statement is needed.

Haksins proposes to use 200,000 cubic yards over existing fill within the diked area. The remaining 300,000 cubic yards would be used to bring 4,000 feet of existing levee up to 17 feet above low tide.

The dirt will come from "upland areas," according to the Corps.

Disaster Roles are Detailed

Nine San Mateo County cities have signed a Statement of Agreement with the Golden Gate Chapter of the American National Red Cross, which clarifies the roles of local government and the Red Cross in disaster preparedness planning and operations in time of natural disaster.

To date, Belmont, Brisbane, Burlingame, Half Moon Bay, Pacifica, Portola Valley, San Bruno, San Carlos and San Mateo have signed the statement. Other cities are expected to follow suit early next year, according to Herb Riley, Red Cross Disaster Services chairman.

The American National Red Cross is committed by its Congressional Charter to work with local government units, local emergency services and civil defense organizations to undertake relief activities and to help alleviate disaster-caused suffering.

Trained volunteers are needed to enable Red Cross to meet its obligation to provide food, clothing, shelter and supplemental medical care in time of disaster. Free classes are available through local Red Cross offices.

Red Cross First Aid courses are offered throughout the county on a regular basis.

As local government becomes involved in disaster preparedness and relief, an increased number of trained disaster volunteers will be needed throughout the county.

Call your local Red Cross for more information about training and volunteering. In Burlingame, 343-4561; South San Francisco, 589-5864.

HAPPY NEWS FOR SAVERS

No matter what the speculative investor does in 1975 (and judging from '74—it could be hard on the nerves), savers will keep on making money at Home Savings. And while they're doing it, their principal will be safe. Safe because Home backs savings with assets over 5¼ billion dollars. Safe because savings are insured by a Federal agency to $40,000 for an individual...to $560,000 for a family of 4!

MEMBER FSLIC Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. Your Savings Insured to $40,000

OK, so your savings are safe at Home, but what about growth? The least you can earn at Home is 5¼% with a day-in to day-out Passbook Account (compared to 4½% at most banks). Other types of accounts let you earn much more.

Now, for example, in addition to the popular 7½% 4 to 10 year Term Account, Home offers the brand new 7¾% 6 year Term Account, $1000 minimum. Leaving interest to compound daily, the effective yield is 8.06%!

Welcome New Year

"Welcome the New Year, let the old year go
With broken resolutions, errors made;
Again the Cycle changes, now we know
Another span. Come, face it, unafraid!"

"No one," Wrote Charles Lamb, "ever regarded the First of January with indifference."

For him the New Year was a time to forget that which he had "suffered, performed or neglected . . . for it is more noble and more profitable to take a cheerful and reassuring view of our condition and that of humanity in general, laying aside futile reflections on past imprudence and mismanagement and resolving for the future to do our utmost in fulfilling our duty toward God and our fellowmen."

In the same frame of mind Ralph Waldo Emerson suggested that citizens resolve to realize that government — especially local government — "is not superior to the citizen . . . every law and usage was a man's expedient to meet a particular case. They are all alterable, we may make them good; we may make them better." While many citizens know that this is true, 35 per cent of the voters of San Mateo County did not bother to vote in the last election, thereby leaving the making of the laws that govern them to other people.

With Lamb and Emerson, Betty Luerssen agrees that the New Year is a time to forget futile reflections of last year's failures and start anew. Speaking for many housewives she wrote an ode to her calendar:

"Scribbled pages testify to dates you've helped me keep,
Grocery lists remembered
And intentions by the heap.
Such as write to Mother L
And darn R's socks today
Wash the kitchen windows now
(the ones still streaked and gray.)"
"Your successor now I greet with pages clean and new -
Now last years' good intentions won't
Stare back at you."

The sages agree that the New Year is a good time to start anew. Abraham Lincoln advised his feilow Americans thusly: "Having chosen our course without guile and with pure purpose, let us renew our trust in God and go forward without fear and with manly hearts."

On the other hand Heinrich Heine, the German poet, used the New Year to resolve to wish for "the stupid a little understanding." Phyllis McGinley settled upon a plan that calls for "giving up no luxurious bad habits." Such a resolution is reasonable she says because "science may yet find vitamins in tobacco or something especially nutritious in caffeine. Wouldn't I feel silly then, having spent all that anguish of mind in doing without them?"

In the same frame of mind a wag advises people resolve to do what ever "silly, follish things that occur to them, such as: wear a high silk hat to church; carry a kewpie doll to work; live up to an ideal such as Archie Bunker, Maud or Flip Wilson; or stand in the middle of Market Street on a busy day and blow a noise-maker."

Upon a New Year's day O.W. Baylor figured out that if he made a person happy each day he would have improved the life of 365 people in one year and in 40 years he would have spread cheer to 14,600 persons.

All of these writers agree that whatever resolutions one makes on Jan. 1, the New Year contains 12 shining months in which to make the dreams come true.

"I am a fresh start -
So make the most of me. . .
Hold me tightly to your heart
Or let me slip through your careless fingers
Like the sands of time
I am the New Year -

— Nick Kenny —

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

SF State Lists Extension Classes

More than 40 courses in a variety of subject areas will be offered in January by San Francisco State University's Extension Service.

The intersession courses, including special weekend workshops and travel-study programs, will all be held between Jan. 2 and 24.

Of the 35 offerings in traditional subjects are unusual courses in "Computers in the Arts and Humanities," "The Big League Blond in Film," "Stereo Recording," "Sensitivity Training for Family Interactions," "Life in the Thirties" and "Contemporary Issues in American Politics."

Five travel-study courses are also planned. They include weekend sojourns to San Simeon, little known East Bay wineries, and the Sierra via train as well as longer trips to examine the people and cultures in the valley of Mexico and the geology of the Hawaiian Islands.

An artists' weekend retreat — "A Celebration of Women Artists: The Artist in Each Woman" — is scheduled for Jan. 17-19. The weekend session, which has a limited enrollment, will be held at New Horizons, a wooded country estate in Los Gatos.

On the weekend of Jan. 24-25 there will be a conference entitled "Stalking the Wild Word: Doublespeak — 1984 Minus 9." It is being cosponsored by the Extension Service in cooperation with the International Society for General Semantics. The conference is designed to bring together people wanting to know more about the conditions through which human communication achieves accuracy, authenticity and usefulness and will focus attention on "irresponsible uses of language by government, the military, industry and its advertisers, educators and the general public."

The registration deadline for all courses except special weekend programs and travel-study courses is Jan. 2

For details and a brochure describing all intersession courses, contact the office of Extension Services at San Frjncisco State University, 1600 Holloway Ave., S.F. Telephone 469-1373.

Secret Sisters Revealed

The home of Mrs. George Doernhoefer of San Bruno was the setting for the "revealing of secret sisters" Christmas party Dec. 16.

This meeting also had its business agenda and Xi Lambda Sigma Exemplar Chapter's candidate for Queen of the Valentine Ball was announced.

She is Mrs. Clair Young of South San Francisco.

Dec. 22 was the sorority party for their "adopted" sister, Carol Jo Smith, a 17-year-old kidney patient.

The festivities started at 12 p.m., through the day with sorority members and their guests coming to wish Carol the happiest of holidays.

Among the visitors that day were a group of children, ranging in age from 6 to 11 years old, who get together at the home of Diana and Chuck DeSoto, and do "fun things" together.

The next meeting of Xi Lambda Sigma Exemplar Chapter will be held at the home of Mrs. C. Young.

Temple Schedules Series on Stress

An adult study series to provide tools for dealing with the stresses we face will begin Jan. 5 at 9:30 a.m. at Temple Methodist Church, 19th Avenue and Junipero Serra Blvd.

The content of the six sessions follows:

— Jan. 5 "Who's in Control" — how to deal with the difficulties we have with authorities in life, and the final authority.

— Jan 12 "Up the Down Staircase — how to deal with the constant jarring stresses that create discomfort.

— Jan. 19 "Angry at Home" — how to accept deep anger and deal with it.

— Jan. 26 "Judge Not . . ." — how to become less judgemental.

— Feb. 2 "Let's Go—" — how to relate to inner and outer environment.

— Feb. 9 "Turning Inside out" — how to be more spontaneous.

The leader is Mary Ella Stuart, wife of Bishop R. Marvin Stuart. She is both an experienced teacher and a person who is skilled at facing stress. She will plan on group discussion and will focus on providing tools that can be used for a lifetime.

All interested persons are welcome to take part in this six-session series. There is no charge.

Yule Bureau Needs Cash

Cash donations are still needed to meet cash demands of the Christmas Bureau of San Mateo County, the Bureau says, although toys for 10,000 have already been purchased and distributed.

An order for 2,000 turkeys at $12,000 is still a debit on the books —, at least $4,000 more in donations will be necessary to balance the books by year's end, the Bureau says.

Those donations are tax deductible and may be sent to the Bureau at 119 Primrose Road, Burlingame 94010

Yacht Club Gives Award

Charles Weghorn, of the Coyote Point Yacht Club, has been presented the Pacific Inter-Club's eleventh Meritorious Service Award.

According to Lloyd B. Ryland, chairman of the PICYA Safety Committee, Weghorn won the award for his action in two incidents:

• On March 10, he and a crew summoned help for another sailboater stricken off the airport, took two doctors to the craft, and put a crew aboard when the Coast Guard evacuated the boat.

• On June 9, he directed the rescue of two non-swimming adults without life jackets.

New Year Resolutions for Gardeners

By IVA NEWMAN

The beginning of a new year is that time when most people promise themselves and others that they will stop certain habits and improve on others so the new year will be an improvement on the one that has just finished. We would like to suggest that gardeners write down their New Year's resolutions for 1975 and hang the list where it can be seen every time they head for the garden.

It might be a good idea to leave a space so that when the resolutions were carried out and each time they were forgotten or passed over because of being forgotten or in a hurry, it was noted.

The first resolution and one of the most important for both plants and gardener is to read the label on each bottle and can of spray material before it is purchased and again each time it is used and carry out every instruction on the label exactly as stated. Every one that sprays or fertilizes a plant should know what the active ingredient in the material is and why it is being used on that particular plant.

The user also should have thoroughly in mind the "cautions" suggested on the label and take particular pains to carry them out. The government is most particular about all the information needed to use each material safely is on the label.

The second resolution is to use the right fertilizer in the right amount for each plant being fertilized. Don't waste fertilizer. If enough gardeners use more fertilizer than their plants need there is likely to be a shortage of this valuable material for home gardeners.

Nitrogen especially may be in short supply. This material can be saved by using a low nitrogen formula fertilizer on such plants as begonias, azaleas and rhododendrons.

The majority of home gardeners are wiser to use a commercial fertilizer especially blended for use on these plants and the lable usually tells the amount of fertilizer needed per plant according to its size. Save the high nitrogen fertilizers for roses and other shrubs that are heavy feeders.

Save Water

A third resolution is save on water by knowing just how much water is needed by the plants in the various sections of the garden and give them all they need, but don't waste it. Here is where a soil test tube pays for itself. Before watering push the tube into the soil to a depth of 10 or 12 inches. Pull it out and examine the soil in the open area of the tube and see how deeply the soil is dry.

Water should be applied to wet the soil to the depth that it is dry. Use a favorite method of watering for 15 minutes, stop and test with the tube to see how deeply the water has penetrated. If the soil is wet to the root depth of the plants being watered move on to another area. If it is not turn your watering device on again in the same area for another 10 or 15 minutes and repeat the test.

Keep this up until the soil is wetted to the root depth and write down the time the watering device had to be run at that spot. Don't water again until the soil in the test tube shows a need for more moisture. By keeping a written record of the various sections of the garden watering can become routine.

A fourth resolution is to plant a low, annual ground cover over the area where spring-flowering bulbs were planted. It doesn't make any difference whether the bulbs were placed in a large wooden planter, a single row along the drive or in a large bed in the center of the lawn.

Pansies, violas, sweet alyssum or any low-growing, mat-like annual can be used. These low annuals not only dress up the bulb beds they protect the bulb flowers from being damaged when rain and wind bend them over to what would otherwise be muddy soil.

These small plants also get the bulbs watered after the flowers are gone, thus improving the bulbs for another year of bloom. The leaves don't look bad at all when backed up with a mass of low flowering annuals.

A fifth resolution is to get all the pruning equipment cleaned up in a hurry as fruit trees pruning time is here. Get a plastic carrier (avilable at discount stores and supermarkets) to hold pruning shears, saws, sealing compound, a soft rag and a tall type fruit jar with a tight lid to carry rubbing alcohol.

Resolve to start with clean shears and to dip the cutting blade of the shears in the alcohol before moving on to another plant. The cloth is to wipe the shears after the blades are dipped. This method of sterilizing the shears is not foolproof but it does remove the sticky sap that gums up the blades and it does cut down on the incidence of disease transfer.

However, to be on the safe side, when you know a branch is diseased it is better to place the shears in boiling water for ten minutes and oil them good after taking them out of the water.

Using tree seal on the wounds when it is too stiff often causes dieback. Make this material the consistency of molasses by adding water to the material in the can and stirring it until well blended. It should spread as easily as softened butter.

Clean Tools

The sixth resolution is to clean and put tools away properly after each use. Spades and shovels that have been used for digging should be hosed clean and hung handle down in the garage or basement to keep the water from collecting along the cutting edge and causing rust.

Rakes, hoes and other tools used to work the soil should be cleaned and hung in the same manner. The lawn mower is a special tool that should be cleaned and oiled after each using to keep it doing its job efficiently. Grass clinging to the cutting blades must be removed as it will cause rust and dulling of the blade. Keep sharpening tools and oil handy so there is no excuse for not keeping tools in usable condition.

The seventh resolution is to take care of gift plants so they will continue to produce beauty and give pleasure. Azaleas and poinsettias, the two most popular gift plants, will need repotting after they have finished flowering.

This consists of knocking the plants out of the pots they came in, loosening and carefully removing at least half of the soil around their roots and repotting in a one size larger pot.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

Happy New Year to you all. What better way to start off the year than with a new recipe? This particular dish uses zucchini and ground beef and makes a generous and tasty entree. Another attractive feature is that it is even better if you make it the day before and allow it to gather itself together overnight in the refrigerator.

ZUCCHINI BEEF CASSEROLE

12 pound zucchini
6 teaspoon salt
1 pound ground beef
4 teaspoon salt (additional)
1 clove garlic minced
1 large onion chopped fine
3 stalks celery, chopped
1 1-pound can tomatoes
1 can tomato poaste
4 pound pasteurized process cheese spread, sliced
cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cut the one and one-fourth pounds zucchini in pieces; cover with water, add three-fourths teaspoon salt and boil for about 4 minutes, until tender. Pour into colander and allow to drain while you prepare rest of recipe.

In large skillet, brown the pound ground beef sprinkled with the half teaspoon salt. Add the one clove garlic, minced; one chopped onion, three stalks celery, chopped; one pound can tomatoes and one can tomato paste. Stir well and cook slowly for 10 minutes. Add more salt, if needed, and pepper to taste. Turn into large ungreased baking dish and cover with ½ pound cheese slices. Lastly sprinkle with the two-thirds cup Parmesan cheese. Bake uncovered at 350-degree oven until it bubbles about 20 minutes, if ingredients are hot.

However if you make the dish the night before, it takes longer for the dish to bubble, around 45 minutes. Serves 8.

In last week's column we featured a recipe for 1-2-3 Turkey Pie and there were several errors. So let's run it by again.

1-2-3 TURKEY PIE

1 cup diced cooker turkey
1 cup cubed, cooked potatoes
4 cup cooked carrots, peas or cut green beans
1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
2 cup milk
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 teaspoon poultry seasoning, or as desired
1 cup package biscuit mix
One-third cup milk

Combine the one cup cooked turkey, one cup cooked potatoes and one-half cup cooked vegetables in a quart and half casserole. Blend the one can condensed cream of chicken soup with the fourth cup milk, one tablespoon minced onion and fourth teaspoon poultry seasoning; pour over turkey and vegetables. Bake in preheated 450-degree oven for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile combine the one cup biscuit mix with the one-third cup milk; roll one-half inch thick and cut into six biscuits. Remove casserole from oven; place biscuits on top. Return to oven and continue baking about 15 minutes or until biscuits are browned. Serves 3.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Fifty years of marriage were marked recently by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gotelli of South San Francisco, who were honored on the occasion at a surprise party given at the Brentwood Lodge in that city. The celebration, which was attended by 100 friends and relatives, was given by the couple's children and their spouses: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fornaciari and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gotelli, all of South San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gotelli of Burlingame. The Gotellis, who are longtime Peninsula residents, were married on Nov. 23, 1924 in San Francisco. Their family also includes eight grandchildren.

Pacifican Wins Contest

Mrs. Elee Mao, 628 Forest Lake Drive, Pacifica, has won the "logo"ncontest conducted by Planned Parenthood Association of San Mateo County.

She is the wife of Larry Mao, who works for the Bank of Canton, San Francisco, and the mother of two-year-old Nicole, who she describes as a "planned" child.

Mrs. Mao was winner of the $50 first prize. Two runner-up prizes of $25 each were awarded to Sheila Pamfiloff, Daly City, and Richard Arrighi, formerly of Burlingame and now of San Francisco.

Honorable mention among the many entries received was given to those of Marguritte Vilagi, Redwood City, and Edward Lu, Mountain View.

Mrs. Mao, who describes herself as a "retired" artist since the birth of Nicole, has nevertheless exhibited and won awards recently in Pacifica, Daly City and Santa Rosa. She is a 1971 graduate of Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Her selection was made by a judges' panel composed of Alec Stern, San Mateo commercial artist; John M. Ward, county supervisor-elect, and Mrs. David Boyle, chairman, Policy and Expansion Committee, Board of Trustees, Planned Parenthood Association/San Mateo County. Mrs. Boyle also served as chairman of the "logo" selection committee.

The winning selection will now be referred to the Board of Trustees at its January meeting, at which time it will be decided if it will become the "official" symbol of the local association.

GIRL SCOUTING

Louanne Heath

Happy 1975 everyone! Let's all hope the coming months are happy, healthy and prosperous ones for all.

Members of the Daly City Committee for Children's Services are starting the new year on a positive note.

The committee is calling an organizational meeting for Jan. 6 at 7 p.m. in the War Memorial Building, 144 Hillside Blvd.

The committee's Mrs. Nemar Gonzalez urges everyone interested in providing adequate care for the children of working mothers to attend this meeting, so there can be an interchange of ideas and thinking on the subject.

Single heads of households, parents who are attending school, working mothers or unwed mothers are all asked to attend and help elect board members and begin work on a set of bylaws.

"A day care center is important to people who need a place to leave their children while they attend job training classes so such people should make a special point to attend the gathering to assure themselves of a say in a place that would serve their special needs," Mrs. Gonzalez said.

Special care will be provided for children of parents attending the meeting.

MRS. VIRGINIA TIERNEY, president of the Friends of the Library, phoned just before Christmas to say Mrs. Virginia Nowicki had agreed to accept a place on the book fair committee.

MRS. ELIZABETH DANIELS of Westlake was the heroine of one Christmas season party.

The members of Friends outside and the members of Lakeside Presbyterian Church staged a church decorating party that lasted an entire day. Church members and club members hung ornaments and wreaths, put up Christmas trees, draped garlands and festooned bulletin boards throughout both church buildings.

Amidst the excitement and fun and all the activity, Mrs. Daniels and her helpers worked quietly in the kitchen. When hunger pains struck she was ready with enough chili to feed an entire regiment!

MEMBERS OF THE MARY'S Help Hospital Guild celebrated a fine year and a successful boutique with a holiday cocktail party held at the Forest Hill Lodge in San Francisco.

Among the newest members of the guild are Mrs. Anthony J. Duffy, Mrs. Richard Gill, Amelia Lamas, Mrs. Milton Mecklenburg, Mrs. Harry White, Mrs. James Zavitka, Mrs. Richard Brewer and Mrs. Carlyle Hillman.

SCOUTS ARE SUPPOSED to be prepared for any emergency, and it always comes as a great testimony to the fine job that program does when a scout performs bove and beyond in an emergency.

The northern district of Boy Scouts had planned a leadership development course to be given on a recent weekend in Junipero Serra park, and young Pete had signed up to take the course as a young adult. At the very last moment the man who had organized the entire training session became ill and was unable to take charge. "Student" Pete immediately switched roles and ran a great leadership session.

According to Mrs. James Morino who reported the incident, "We think we have our Scouts prepared for any emergency, and isn't it nice when their skills even include people-to-people dependability."

GIRL SCOUT COOKIE sale scheduled for January 10-26 will be the big girl-oriented fund-raising activity of the Daly City Girl Scout Association, San Francisco Bay Council.

Troops must clear all special sales with Mrs. Kathy Skirra who is in charge of bank, retail stores, shopping center, etc., sales for the Daly City area. Troop leaders making their own arrangements without checking with Mrs. Skirra will hear from their association chairwoman.

IMPORTANT 1975 dates for Girl Scouting include the Bay Area-wide Council meeting scheduled for May 14 in the Richmond Auditorium and the July 14-21 Sierra Camp to be directed at Sugar Pine by Mrs. Mary Ann Dale.

NEW BROWNIE SCOUT Joanna Smith was invested into troop No. 1810 over the holidays by troop leader Roz Morino. Welcoming Joanna at the party were Gina Cadwell, Chrissy Evanikoff, Cindy Pierce, Lorelei Morino, Chris Gumina, Anna Thompson, Yvette Scoutt and assistant leader Lori Golden.

THE HAND-IN-HAND Christmas fairy program was enhanced by the participation of Daly City Girl Scout troop number 1586 led by Mrs. Diane Holder.

Cadette Scouts playing Christmas fairy's for patients at the Silvercrest residence center included Shirley Calvo, Jeanette Bess, Dawne Holder, Linda Rogers, Teresa Cinti, Liza Vitalis, and Nancy Bettancourt.

County Scout Executive Named by Schwarzbach

Alvin L. (Al) Schwarzbach announces the appointment of Harold Krank of Houston, Texas, as San Mateo County Council, Boy Scouts of America Scout Executive.

Krank will begin his duties by the end of January.

New Eagles in Daly City include Steven Murray of troop number 129 and Kornell Kwok of troop number 182.

Northern District's newest unit is troop number 292, sponsored by American Legion Post 410 in Daly City; Larry Keith is the Scoutmaster.

Jan. 6 Cub Roundtable is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Los Cerritos School, 210 West Orange Ave. in South San Francisco.

All Northern District cubmasters are expected to attend.

Scouters Roundtable will be held at the same time and place.

Adult Bar, Bat Mitzvah Program Set by Temple

Congregation Beth Israel-Judea, the Temple on Brotherhood Way, will offer an Adult Bar and Bat Mitzvah program.

Sunday morning, Jan. 12, in Fellowship Hall at the Temple, a special breakfast and introductory session will be held. Donation for the breakfast is $1.50 per person.

Details of the program will be explained by Rabbi Herbert Morris. Courses will be offered on Monday evenings at the Temple beginning Jan. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

A beginners' Hebrew (prayerbook) course will be offered by Rabbi Morris. Rabbi Malcolm Sparer will conduct the second hour (8:30-9:30) with five separate lectures on the Talmud, its meaning and application to daily living.

Rabbi Roger Herst and Rabbi Arthur Kolatch will be lecturing in March and April as part of this adult Bar/Bat Mitzvah program.

The series is open to the community. Registration will be held at the breakfast on Jan. 12. Details regarding fees may be secured by contacting the Temple office at 586-8833.

Special Family Worship Services will be held Jan. 3 at 8 p.m. at the Temple on Brotherhood Way. Religious School students from the seventh grade will participate in the service. Following the service, folk dancing will be led by Robin Raphael and the student dance group.

Jan. 4, the reading of the Book of Exodus will begin. A special party has been arranged for this occasion. After the service a discussion will be led by Rabbi Herbert Morris followed by a luncheon, singing of Shabbat songs and Israeli Folk Dancing. The luncheon will be sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cappel.

Following winter recess, Sunday School classes will resume at A.P. Giannini Jan. 5. Hebrew classes will resume on Monday afternoon at the Temple on Brotherhood Way.

Square Dance Groups Win Sponsorship

The South San Francisco Parks and Recreation Commission voted last week to co-sponsor three square dance groups, the Community Choraliers and the Conquistadors.

The dance groups are the Square Chicks, 49ers and Whirlaways.

The commission debated the requirements for co-sponsorship. Among requirements agreed upon are that 80 per cent of the clubs' members must be from South San Francisco, they be non-profit, and open to all residents.

They also must submit financial statements. In return, they will receive priority use of recreation and school facilities, professional guidance from the department, and other facilities.

The commission deferred a number of other issues on the agenda, most of them to the Jan. 23 meeting.

The offer to sell the city a 20½-acre tract on Sign Hill for $75,000 was deferred until the city's capital improvements budget is presented in January.

SSF Rec Offers Energy Program

The South San Francisco Recreation Department is offering a class entitled "Meeting Our Energy Requirements" during the Winter program.

The two class sessions will deal with:

- The energy outlook for the United States and Northern California.
- How energy can be practically conserved by consumers in both business and the home.

The class will meet Wednesday evenings, Jan. 13 and 20, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Harry Bain, coordinator of Environmental Information for Pacific Gas and Electric Company, plans two slide presentations, one on the environment and the other on conservation, and will discuss the problems and the scarcities of oil and natural gas, rising fuel prices, and the feasibility of nuclear power for riding out the energy problem over the next few years.

The class is offered free by the Recreation Department. Registration, however, is required as the class size is limited.

Registration forms are available during the last week of December in the winter brochure at either City Library, or at our Admin trative Office, No. 3 South Linden Ave.

Registration forms must be mailed by Jan. 6.

ACS Reports on Screening Unit

Thanks to the efforts of the San Mateo County Unit of the American Cancer Society, 250 Peninsula women were screened during Cancer Education Week at a free Mobile Cancer Detection Unit.

Of that number, 44 women were referred to their own physicians for follow-up examinations. Local medical men who volunteered their services for the unit included Doctors Gerald Sydorak, M. Condy Pugh Jr., John S. Quilici, Fred Wurlitzer, H. Ellsworth DuBois, Norman D. Morrison Jr., Newton J. Harband, Philip R. Myers, Michael Mainardi, Mariam K. Yost and Thomas E. Farthing.

Dr. Wurlitzer served as chairman of the physicians.

The unit, which was stationed at the Hillsdale Shopping Center, also received assistance from College of San Mateo student nurses, directed by Mary Schoenky, head of nurses at CSM, and Sandy Brock, student chairman.

In addition to the free examinations, participants also received instruction on the correct procedure for self-examination and leaflets on the subject. Members of the ACS Cancer League disseminated the printed matter to 2000 persons.

In view of the screening's success, the ACS unit has decided to repeat the project next year when it is hoped mobile units will be set up at all major shopping centers in the country.

Additional information abokt the Cancer Society and its programs may be obtained by contacting the local office, 1163 Chess Drive, Suite A, Foster City. Mrs. Lorraine Berg is cancer education chairman for the San Mateo County Unit.

In the Santa Clara Valley

Some Growing Pains for 'Dial-a-Ride'

By VERN KROGH

Santa Clara County's $39 million county wide "dial-a-ride" bus service is still undergoing severe birth pains after a month of operation.

But not only are its proponents confident of its survival and eventual success, but so — apparently — are its opponents.

The taxi owners' association of the county, for example, has already filed a $1 million suit against the Santa Clara Transit system demanding the district buy them out and provide jobs for their drivers, according to Frank Lara, transit marketing officer for the project.

Because anyone will be able to pick up a telephone and have a bus pick him up at his house and deliver him to his designation, the taxi companies claim they will be put out of business.

As it is, the district has already purchased two bus lines and part of a third for $1 million.

"Our problem has been that we've been too successful," Lara says.

"The interest in the system has far exceeded our fondest expectations."

According to Lara, 440,000 brightly colored pamphlets were inserted into various publications to reach everyone possible in the sprawling valley.

"We expected our ridership to grow," he explained. "Our projected capacity was estimated to be 10,000 to 15,000 riders a day. But the day after Thanksgiving, 3,000 people — one third of the projected capacity — rode the buses.

"We didn't think we would reach our full capacity in 18 months to two years. Now we expect to within six months. Our operations are already loaded. We just didn't have enough equipment."

The telephone answering and dispatching systems, despite being highly computerized, broke down almost completely.

Transit officials, for example, expected passengers who wanted a bus would pick up the telephone and say "I'm at this address, and I want to go to the Valley Medical Center."

The calls, according to the theory, should have lasted no more than 30 seconds. The rider's request would be put into a computer, and a bus would be dispatched to his location.

Instead, the calls began to back up as callers swamped the district's 70 telephones and dispatchers began to find themselves overwhelmed not only with requests for buses but for information about the system.

Minutes stretched into hours.

As the delays became longer, patrons became discouraged, and patronage dropped off. But still not enough.

"Now we must begin to build interest again," Lara says, pointing out that 35 additional people were hired on one Monday.

"They will be working on telephones within a week, after a brief training course," he reported.

The system extends from Gilroy in the southern part of the county to Palo Alto in the north — with the county divided into four sections. Each has its own control room (with 12 dispatchers assigned to each at present) and its own local telephone number.

The dial-a-buses will be connected to arterial bus lines, one of which will run into San Mateo County, ending at the Menlo Park Southern Pacific depot.

"We were inundated," James T. Pott, county transportation director, adds. "For the first time, more than a million people know how to spell 'transit,' a seven-letter word.

"A new toy came, and the people grabbed at it. We were drowned by incoming calls — 50,000 calls a day. We found we must make better use of our rolling stock.

According to Lara, it is estimated a conventional bus system would have served 60 per cent of the people in the county.

"You lay dial-a-ride over this, and you serve 90 per cent. But buses alone cannot do it. They must be tied to a fixed way system such as BART."

The Santa Clara system is the largest in the nation — spreading over 240 square miles.

While some 40 other communities, including Richmond, have some variation of a personalized bus service, all are microscopic in size to this new system.

And it is Santa Clara County that is being watched. Transit officials from throughout the world, including Belgium, France, Japan and Canada have all expressed interest.

And so has San Mateo County.

County Engineer S. H. Cantwell Jr. points out that a San Mateo County transit study provides a pilot personalized system in the central part of the county.

But only after the county's major system is completed and its patronage indicates a need for a personalized system will it become a reality.

George Nickelson, a senior engineer under Cantwell, said an area of some 4.8 square miles bounded by Broadway, Burlingame, on the north, the Bay on the East, Fifth Avenue in downtown San Mateo in the south and Hillsborough on the west, has been selected out of four possible areas in a "San Mateo County Local Bus Transit Study" by the consulting firm of PB-T-B-Wilbur Smith-Kirker-Chapman as the best location for the study.

The area, according to Nickelson, was chosen because of the preponderance of older people and families with a relatively low income living there.

Under the proposal, existing municipal systems would be utilized and city buses would be modified to fit into a dial-a-ride system.

The experimental system would serve originally a population of approximately 36,000, and by 1977-78 would have an annual operating budget of some $400,000.

In comparison to Santa Clara, which charges a maximum fare of 25-cents, 10-cents for youth and provides free service to the blind, the San Mateo system would charge a 50-cent fare.

It is no secret that the aged and handicapped of San Mateo look hopefully forward to a bus system that would pick them up at their homes and deliver them to their classrooms, their doctor or to the market.

Only recently, The Post received appeals from students at El Portal del Sol School for the orthopedically handicapped about such a bus service here.

But, Lara warns, any successful system must not be directed at any class of people, but must serve everyone equally.

And the people must be prepared to pay for it, because "no public transit system in the United States is self-sustaining."

"The fare boxes cannot do it," he says. "If you raise the price, the patronage drops off. One theory is that it should be the same as other public services such as police and fire departments."

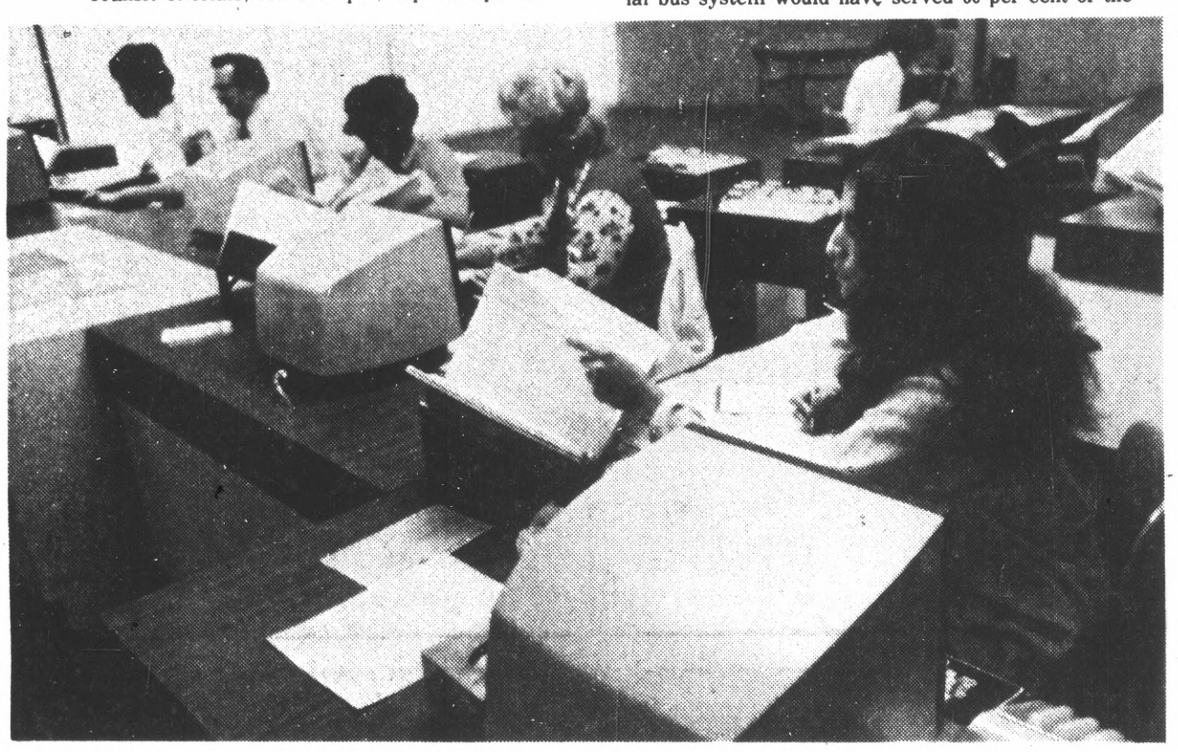
It is estimated, according to Lara that fares will pay for no more than 25 to 30 per cent of the costs.

In Santa Clara County, the transit district will submit a measure to the populace in May for a half-cent sales tax. This, it is estimated, will cost the average taxpayer only $27 a year.

And so the eyes of the nation focus on Santa Clara County. Will it exceed its planners' fondest dreams?

Or will it become a financial disaster?

Only time will tell. But the betting now is not only will it fill a vacuum and provide a long needed service, that it will take automobiles off the road but it may eventually expand to its neighbor to the north.



From an 'Arbor' to a 'Plaza'

What started as a simple arbor to shade senior citizens using South San Francisco City Hall park benches has grown into a $19,500 plaza.

The project received one more escalation. South San Francisco contractor Joe Eberle's $28,300 bid was the only one received, and the City Council voted, 4-1, to reject the bid. The city intends to rebid the project, now called the "Public Rest Area at the Civic Center."

Councilman Leo Padreddii, opposes the plans, voted "no," on grounds that even $19,500 was too much.

"I did not realize that things were going so well for contractors," commented Councilman Dick Battaglia.

City Manager Ed Alario, who recommended rejection of the bid, said more contractors would be made aware of the project.

In other action, the council:

✓ Reduced the business license tax for astrologists and other seers from $100 a day to $500 a year. The city tax has been called as prohibitive and confiscatory, City Atty. John Noonan said the city might face a law suit it might not win, unless the tax were cut.

✓ Adopted a resolution authorizing Alario to enter into an Agreement with the South San Francisco-San Bruno Information and Referral Center to spend $35,000 appropriated for the center's program. Councilmen were assured by Manager Larry Smith that efforts were beind made to find additional sources of support.

✓ Authorized advertising for bids for "removal or demolition" of five buildings on the site of the future fire-police complex on Grand and Chestnut Avenues. Site plans apparently will be revised to save two other buildings.

'New Kind' of Law School To Open in South City

By JACK BIK

A new kind of law school will be opening in late January in downtown South San Francisco — the Magna Carta University's School of the Law.

Being remodeled to accommodate the school is the columnaded 56-year-old Crocker Bank building overlooking Linden and Grand Avenues.

Victor Brincat, president of the school and moving force behind its organization, expects a first year enrollment of about 50 students. With just a minimum of publicity, he said, 72 have already applied.

"I haven't even mailed out a catalogue, yet," he said.

Brincat said that he decided to open the new school, because he felt that existing law schools were failing to fill the need for more lawyers.

Most law schools, he says, only accept one out of every 10 who apply. Of those accepted, he said, most students flunk out by their final year. Of those receiving their degree, the overwhelming number fail the bar examination.

At Magna Carta, Brincat predicts, some 90 to 95 per cent will be expected to pass their bar examination.

First year students will be required to complete the course of study successfully and pass the junior bar examination before being allowed to continue study of law.

"We will work toward 100 per cent passage on the junior bar," Brincat declares, "We intend to employ, not only competent instructors, but also counselors and administrative personnel, who will work directly with the students in order to make certain they realize what is involved in the study of law and gain the knowledge necessary to pass the state bar examination."

With classes starting in January, rather than the traditional September, there will be four months before the bar exam, during which students can receive special training on the examination.

Brincat says that if it is evident that the student is not suited for study of law, school officials will tell him or her as early as possible, "in a nice way." He charged some law schools just take the student's tuition even after it is evident the student can never qualify for law.

Ethics will be stressed, Brincat said.

"Since Watergate, people tend to look down on attorneys. People have to trust them. Attorneys who take advantage of their clients often get the idea in school that they are simply going into a profession where they can make a lot of money. Attorneys have an obligation to the public. We hope to change their image."

Brincat has applied for accreditation by the State Bar Examiners. He expects to receive it in the minimum time — two years.

Graduates will receive the degree of doctor of jurisprudence.

TUITION WILL be $50 per unit, and a student must carry at least 18 units a year. Classes will be at night, with day classes planned for the future.

The old building is surprisingly suited for a law school. With its classic bank design, it looks like a traditional college. Its massive vaults will hold school records.

Brincat describes himself as an entrepreneur. Owner of various enterprises on the Peninsula — including a shopping center, travel agency, body shop — his latest project was the opening of a law center in San Bruno. Here, a number of lawyers share a law library, secretary and other facilities.

Working with Brincat is Donald Peoples. He has worked as a teacher in the Fresno area and operated a summer theater. He is the administrative dean.

Among the four instructors will be Mike Galligan, northern judicial district traffic referee.

$3,500 Bank Robbery

The First National Bank of Daly City branch, 1551 El Camino Real, Millbrae, was held up at about 7:20 p.m. Friday, by a large gunman with a full beard. He escaped with an estimated $3,500, according to police reports.

The bank, which stays open until 8 p.m., was empty when the man entered through the north door and confronted Manager Louis Soucie and two tellers with what looked like an automatic pistol, police said. The robber handed a cloth bank money bag to teller Michella Cardinale and said "Allright everybody, this is the real thing. I'm not kidding," officers said the victims told them.

Getting the cash from the first teller, the robber gave the bag to teller Mary O'Shay, who put her cash in it, police went on.

The man went out the south door after having been in the bank only two minutes or so, police said. There were no other customers at the time, they added. A car was heard to start up outside but wasn't seen, officers learned.

The robber was described as white, about 28 years old, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds and wearing a ski hat and red plaid shirt but no mask.

Trees Stolen on Coastside.

Theft of 37 trees from his 11-acre property adjacent to Cabrillo Highway in Pescadero was reported to the sheriff's office Sunday by Charles R. Payne.

Payne told Deputy Sheriff Larry Boss that between 8 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday, a total of 33 small cypress trees and four Monterey pine trees were dug up and taken from their location about 100 yards from, and in plain sight of the highway.

The trees, many of them just newly planted and with burlap around the roots, ranged in height from 2½ to 3½ feet

Runner-up Bowl

We've been sitting around, using the spare time afforded us by the holiday season, contemplating whether the old NFL Runner-Up Bowl was more ridiculous than having virtually one-third of the league in playoff eliminations. About the only real difference that we've been able to discern is that in the former we found out who the best was of the also-rans. In the latter, we find out who the worst is of the also-rans.

We don't mean to pick on pro football. If possible, the hockey playoffs — with the whole league except the most abject failures replaying a mini-season — are even sillier, and the basketball playoffs are right behind; and then only because they will be modified this year. What do playoffs really prove, after all — aside from how much more money can be made — that hasn't already been proved in the regular seasons?

But we have, we believe, a sporting proposal, a new playoff plan which will not only work for all sports, but which will in itself eventually remove any need for playoffs.

Under our plan, there would annually be a playoff among all teams who DON'T make their league's playoffs. Since all teams would then automatically be in a playoff, this would eliminate the need for a regular season and bring about what the owners apparently want, anyway — a full-season playoff season. The champs of the losers' playoffs would then play the champs of the winners' playoffs in the Super-Duper Bowl. Winners of the Super-Duper Bowl would then be retired from the league, all players, coaches, front office men, etc., to be pensioned off for life at 90 per cent of the salaries they were earning at the time of their forced retirement. (We haven't yet worked out the details of how to prevent teams from throwing championships until they work their salaries up to absolute maximums. But we haven't claimed this is a PERFECT plan.) This would, of course, eventually save a lot of money.

OTHER POSITIVE results would be that eventually every team would win the Super-Duper Bowl. Thus, no player, coach or owner would retire without having experienced the ecstacy of being a winner, and it would be a guarantee that every player, coach, etc., would be able to retire at the apex of his career without ever having to deal with the mental anguish of performing when over the hill.

Eventually one team would be left — the worst team ever assembled. But members would not be required to embarrass themselves, because there would be no more opposition, and the combination of their ineptitude and not being able to play anything but inter-squad games would eventually bore the public, which would in time demand the team's break-up, which would, of course, end professional football, or basketball, or hockey, or baseball, or whatever sport.

And then we could all relax and enjoy high school and college games again, and know that the team we rooted for all during the REGULAR season would end up in the place in the standings it had fought for all during that regular season.

IF YOU ARE ONE of those old, old 49er fans who still believes that the backfield including Hugh McElhenny and John Henry Johnson flanking fullback Joe Perry was the greatest running combination of all time, you're right. It isn't just a fond memory.

To check our memory, we recently looked the boys up on the pro football all-time rushing charts to see how much their individual and combined accomplishments had diminished over the years. They hardly have at all. Perry, Johnson and McElhenny rate as the third, fifth and fifteenth best ground gainers, respectively, of all time. There's not another backfield in pro football history that has more than one of its runners among the top 15.

AS YOU KNOW, we have often discussed football injuries in this column, and find interesting some of the ongoing studies being made on them. Recently, two professors from the Department of Physical Education of the University of North Carolina, Carl S. Blyth and Frederick O. Mueller, released a survey of high school football injuries they have been compiling for the past several years. It appeared in a McGraw-Hill publication and was summarized at an AMA convention. It was a long and detailed study full of interesting information, but three sets of statistics which particularly interested us, because we had not known of a study having been done in these particular areas, were as follows: Teams that have less contact in practice have fewer injuries and win more games. Also 62.4 per cent of injuries occurring on tackles are suffered by the tackler and injuries occur most often to the following positions, in the order in which they appear: fullback, quarterback, defensive tackle, offensive halfback.

AS THIS IS WRITTEN, we don't know the eventual disposition of Jim (better known to Charley Finley as Catfish) Hunter, although we predict that he'll end up with one of the rich teams — probably the Dodgers, the Red Sox, or either of the New York teams. There are other rich teams, of course, but the above four — with the possible exception of Boston — can offer the happy combination of big direct money and big fringe money, and are among — with the possible exception of Los Angeles — the better places to live and play in the country.

In L.A., Catfish would end up in the movies, and in New York he'd become a truly national if not internationally known figure, and do a lot of commercials. We don't know if he'd help the Mets improve their position that much, but both the Yankees and Red Sox were possibly one pitcher of Hunter's talent away from division titles (don't forget, Bosox owner Tom Yawkey wants one more pennant before he cashes in, and can afford to buy it), and Catfish would quite possibly make the Dodgers into a genuine dynasty.

Be all that as it may, we don't understand how Finley could have let Hunter (if indeed he has) go. Especially considering the fact that Kenny Holtzman has already seriously contemplated retirement, while Vida Blue considers it annually. (And imagine what the two southpaws will demand if Hunter does go.) Add the trading away of relief pitchers Darold Knowles and Bob Locker, and the A's could suddenly be very thin in the pitching department.

Even should the A's lost just Hunter, his going could upset a very delicate balance. The A's, down to two established starters, would have to trade for a replacement for Hunter. The only player they have who could bring them a hurler and who the A's could possibly afford to let go would be Reggie Jackson. Theoretically, the A's could afford to let Jackson go because of the emergence last year of rookie Claudell Washington as a potential star. But no matter how promising Washington looks, and no matter how injury prone Jackson has appeared to become, Jackson is still a man who can hit .280, 35 homers and drive in over 100 runs. Washington hit .280 last year, but he didn't hit any homers, and 100 rbi are hard to come by for any player. Even should Washington be able to equal Jackson's statistics, there is no measuring the value of experience, especially experience gained under the pressure of pennant drives and World Series.

In short, we think Charley may have blown his dynasty.

LOOKING AT WARRIOR team stats, it's easy to understand why they have the successful record they do.

They are outshooting opponents from the floor, 46.4 to 43.6, and are getting up about 8 per cent more shots than opponents, doing them in from the free throw line 78.6 to 72.5 (opponents are getting about 25 per cent more chances from the line), and outscoring them, 108.1 to 104.

LOCAL TAG-END: Former Terra Nova, Skyline College basketball ace Jeff Wellemeyer is San Francisco State's leading rebounder

Hoop Title To Trojans

By FRED BAER
Post Correspondent

After battling most of the state's community college basketball powers to a second-place finish in the 16-team Modesto tournament a week ago, third-ranked Santa Ana figured to have an easy time taking a third straight title in little Skyline's four-team Holiday event.

But the Dons returned home Sunday with increased respect for the Northern schools after Skyline registered a stunning 83-76 comeback win to claim the championship for the first time in the four-year-old tournament.

In fact only one of the four games in the Friday-Saturday tourney at Skyline's San Bruno campus gym didn't provide fans with a thrilling comeback victory.

That was the third place contest in which Santa Rosa rolled to an easy 71-54 triumph over College of San Mateo. That game wasn't even as close as the final score indicates as the bulldogs dropped their ninth straight on a dismal 1-9 campaign — to add to the state's longest large division losing skein.

Friday, Santa Rosa held a six-point lead over Santa Ana with three minutes left but lost in overtime, 99-95. CSM led Skyline 63-55 but lost 73-67.

Skyline (now 8-5) and Santa Ana (13-2) traded the lead 25 times and had 13 deadlocks (including 41-41 at halftime). But the Santa Ana all-tournament duo of guard George Weaver and forward Gregg Green led the Dons on a nine-point streak after the 11th tie to go up 54-45.

The smaller but quicker Trojans responded with interceptions and fast breaks to come right back to within two points at 54-56 with 12:11 left, 6-2 frosh Nick Pappageorge sparking the effort.

It took five more lead changes before Marty Gale's tip-in with five minutes to play put Skyline on top for good, 71-69. Suddenly the Dons couldn't buy a point while Skyline continued to break and drive for a 77-69 advantage with 1:49 to go and it was all over.

Reserve forward Frank Denucci contributed important outside shooting, making good on six of seven field goal attempts.

Trojan soph forward Wyatt Sweeney was voted tourney MVP after scoring 17 points and making several steals. He had 35 points in the two games and was joined on the all-tourney squad by teammates Mason Larkin and Pappageorge, plus Santa Rosa's Jay Bartholomew.

Green tallied a tourney high 28 points in the finale and topped two-game totals with 50 points. Gale had nine assists in the title game.

It was easily the best win of the season for Skyline under yearling coach Lyle Newcomer — who was pitted against his former Occidental College teammate Bill Oates of Santa Ana. Skyline athletic director (and former cage mentor) Walt Rilliet called it possibly the greatest triumph in the school's history. "The only other victory that compares with it was when we upset Contra Costa in the Camino Norte Conference in the 1971-72 season," said Rilliet.

Skyline, unbeaten against small division schools, visits Alameda Thursday and hosts the Stanford JV Saturday before chasing Menlo for the Coast Conference crown next week. CSM begins Golden Gate play Friday, hosting CCSF.

JAMES GARNER SPECIAL

Movie and television star James Garner, poses alongside his namesake special built by Mike Haas of Concord. Garner's Roadster will be on exhibit at the San Mateo Auto Show Jan. 3, 4, and 5 at the county fairgrounds.

South San Franciscan to Exhibit at SM Auto Show

Show promoter Art Himsl announced the acquisition of three major magazine's recent project roadsters for his 21st Annual San Mateo Auto Show, to be held at the Hall of Flowers, San Mateo County Fairgrounds Jan. 3-4-5.

Featured for many months in Rod Action Magazine as Rod Action's Project Roadster, a space frame 1926-27 type Ford roadster with Ford Pinto 4-banger power will be added to the exhibit. This hot rod was commissioned to be hand built by Pete Ogden of Concord for Bill Roach. Upon completion, Roach drove the car to the Street Rod Nationals in Tulsa. This one of a kind car is now owned by Nita Kendrick of San Lorenzo.

Another of the project roadsters to be on hand for the San Mateo event is Hot Rod's "Street Roadster of the Future" built by Andy Brizio of South San Francisco. In March of 1972, Hot Rod Magazine presented a concept of a street roadster of the future. Brizio's first comment upon seeing the classic '32 Ford shape, augmented by 1972 technology was, "is anyone going to build one of these?" — No one was!

Andy and crew went to work and built one. The finished project will be on display at the San Mateo Auto Show.

Also to be exhibited will be from Rod and Custom magazine, a 1923 Ford roadster built by Tom Prufer of Los Gatos.

Tom's car was featured in Rod and Custom as a one-of-a-kind do it your self project, with photos and details on construction from start to finish. This T-trackster hot rod is now owned by Lem Tolliver of South San Francisco.

Supervisor Fitzgerald Has Some Ideas for the Governor

San Mateo County Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald of San Bruno is urging governor-elect Edmund G. Brown Jr. to "effect some vitally needed changes" in the state after he takes office in January.

In a letter to Brown, Fitzgerald contends that the state "has failed the people of California in many areas."

The supervisor cites seven areas "that I consider are costly and tragic to continue in their present condition":

● The prison system in the state has deteriorated to something that is shocking. The lack of meaningful rehabilitation programs and the lack of control over the inmates where widespread physical abuse of prisoners by prisoners occurs is very bad. It is my feeling that many of the Superior Court judges in the state are reluctant to send prisoners to the state prisons.

There is a great need for the realization by the state that some mental health patients cannot be treated at the local level. Mistakes were made in the past by sending more people to state mental institutional warehouses than was warranted. However, the complete reversal of this trend has let many seriously ill patients out in the mainstream of society which has been detrimental to society itself.

● The state does not have a master plan, and many serious planning errors have been made because of this. For example, in the Bay Area, the Bay Area Rapid Transit District was allowed to construct a non-standard rail gauge. This means in the future any inter-state or inter-city rail rapid transit system would either have to go to BART rail, rather than standard, or make BART redo its rail to standard.

Because there is no general plan of the state, it is extremely difficult to relate local regional plans to anything. Even though the State Legislature mandates a master plan for each county and each city, the state has no master plan.

● The welfare system of the state has become so cumbersome and complicated that it is wasteful, and the people who should actually be receiving the help are encumbered by waiting periods. Costly administrative expenses are eating up a great deal of the welfare dollar. There is a lack of ability of the welfare workers who have been trained and who usually have several college degrees to use their expertise in attempting to find solutions to people's problems because the state, in its rule book, dictates exactly what is to be done in almost all situations, which frustrates these really professional people.

● The Medi-Cal program is a disgrace to the state. How can the Medicare program be so successful, and the Medi-Cal program be held in such disrespect by almost all the doctors in the state?

● The Milias-Brown Act presently requires all the cities and the counties to have meet and confer sessions with employes, yet the state that imposes this does not have a similar law.

● There is also the Brown Act which prohibits secret meetings. This law is not applicable to the State Legislature and state officials. It is my opinion that if a law is good enough for one group of legislators or citizens, it is good enough for everyone.

Fitzgerald goes on to say that there will be forthcoming legislation to create a regional government for the Bay Area.

This, he contends, "is merely a means of taking away the authority of local government and transferring in another layer of big government."

"The legislature is attempting to solve this problem from afar. It is attempting to do this without becoming a full partner in the funding of the implementation of the programs, as well as making the policy of these programs," the supervisor states.

"I feel that local government has picked up and done a job where the state has failed, especially in the field of mental health.

"In the area of being sensitive, being available to the people and attempting to do the job with limited financing, I think local government has been frugal as well as responsive to the local needs."

North County Cities Gain in Population

Every major city in the North County has gained population in the four years since the 1970 census, while most cities in the remainder of the county have been losing persons, according to the State Department of Finance estimated.

In the north county, Daly City came closer to catching up to the county's biggest city, San Mateo, by growing 5.2 per cent, to 70,400. Fourth biggest city, South San Francisco, gained 2.2 per cent to 47,650.

Pacifica passed San Bruno as the fifth biggest city, gaining 8.3 per cent to 39,000. San Bruno also gained residents growing 4.4 per cent to 37,850.

Burlingame, still seventh biggest city, gained 1.6 per cent to 27,750. Millbrae gained .6 per cent to 20,900.

Meanwhile, in the Central and South County, San Mateo lost .9 per cent to 78,300; the county's third biggest city, and county seat, Redwood City, lost three per cent, to 54,000.

Population losses were also suffered by Atherton, Hillsborough, Menlo Park, Portola Valley and San Carlos. Only Belmont and Woodside showed growth in the south county, while Foster City and Half Moon Bay grew in the central county.

Two smaller cities in the North County lost residents. Brisbane declined from 3,003 to 2,830, while Colma declined from 537 to 510.

San Mateo County grew 2.7 per cent, netting 14,866 more persons, to a new high of 571,100. The North County Cities of Daly City, Pacifica, San Bruno and South San Francisco added 9,158 additional residents during the past four years.

Fastest growing cities are Foster City, doubling its 9,327 population at its May, 1970 incorporation, to 18,700 in 1974, and Half Moon Bay, increasing 35 per cent to 5,425.

Papan Talks of Financing for Public Schools

While children at Burlingame's Lincoln School frolicked outside at recess, the conversation inside was on a far grimmer note.

Assemblyman Louis Papan (D-Daly City) had spent part of last week on a tour of the elementary school in Burlingame's Ray Park area. He was shown the kind of programs and personnel which might have to be eliminated if the Burlingame School District's financial situation contiues to worsen.

After his walk around the campus, he chatted with faculty, staff and some parents about what the future could be like for Burlingame and other districts like it.

"I don't believe there is any one capsule answer to the problem," he told a cluster of listeners. "But the reliance on the property tax as the sole source of revenue for education is obsolescent. We are going to have to find other means besides that tax to finance public education in California."

Papan added that one of the main chores of the new legislature, which is dominated by members of his party, will be to close certain tax loopholes which allow some citizens to avoid paying what he termed was a fair share of taxes.

"We must equalize the burden of taxation," he said. "There is another challenge in California, too. That involves providing education for the individual student in each district throughout the state. The needs of each child must be met since we have decided to educate all of them. So, it is really a dual challenge for all of us."

Papan did not mention how wealthy districts like Burlingame can continue to exist as they are now constituted in the face of pending legislation which will strap them even further.

Many districts in San Mateo County are operating with deficits this year. In 1975-76, a deficit of some $200,000 is anticipated in Burlingame unless new funds are found — either from Sacramento or from a local tax election, something which the district's trustees have yet to decide upon.

Even with that deficit, the district may still have to release as many as 11 teachers, all of its aides and some other staff personnel. Notices of those employes will be sent out by the March 15, 1975, deadline.

A major purpose for bringing Papan to Lincoln was to give him a first-hand view of the sort of chaos which might result if the district cannot come up with new funds in the coming fiscal year.

"We wanted him to see what can happen to a district like ours when it is faced with forces over which it has no control," explained Lincoln's principal, John Wapensky. "We need people to be aware of the impact of what could occur."

Burlingame and other county districts are battling a triple dilemma: Declining enrollments, stringent state laws which limit revenues per child and inflation.

Seven File for SSF School Board Seats

It appears there will be at least a seven-way race for two seats on the South San Francisco Unified School District Board of Trustees in the March 4 school elections.

Five prospective challengers have taken out nomination papers for the two board positions held by incumbents James G. Christensen and John F. Dillon.

Obtaining papers from the office of County Clerk-Recorder Marvin Church are:

Marie H. Hickman, 320 King Drive; Thelda Y. Estes, 3848 Radburn Drive; William M. Moffatt, 810 Antoinette Lane; Patsy Hilliard, 2485 Erin Place, all of South San Francisco, and David Grozco, 3715 Fleetwood Drive, San Bruno.

In the San Mateo Union High School District, two prospective opponents have taken out papers for the board positions held by incumbents Mrs. Evelyn H. Grant and Dr. John H. Linn.

Gordon E. Davis, who was an unsuccessful candidate in last November's special election, has obtained nomination papers, as has Donald Langendorf, of 401 Hillsborough Blvd., Hillsborough.

In Trustee Area 6 of San Mateo County Board of Education, Mrs. Mary Lou South, of 3224 E. Laurel Creek Drive, Belmont, has taken out nomination papers for the position held by incumbent Mrs. Florence M. Cadigan, of Redwood City.

Deadline for filing of nomination papers is Jan. 3 at 5 p.m.

520,000 Barrels in Bay Area ?

'Oil In Old Tires'

By JOHN HORGAN

In the last month or so, Frank Dashwood estimates that he has personally visited at least 30 city and county dumps.

As he so aptly puts it, "I've been up to my neck in garbage." So he has. Dashwood, 58, of San Mateo, is a specialist in waste management. That's a nice way of saying that he is an expert on converting a sow's ear into a silk purse.

Dashwood, a Canadian of Scottish extraction, sees something positively beautiful in other people's unwanted garbage. Mainly, he believes that it represents a chance to conserve our dwindling resources. Even something as serenely mundane as the discarded automobile tire has caught the enthusiastic fancy of Dashwood, an intense, bright-eyed fellow with a ready wit and a non-stop pitch for the joys of retrieving waste from the scrap heaps of America.

"Look at all those tires," he says, riffling through a stack of meticulously arranged notes. He says there are more than 130,000 tons of vehicle tire carcasses available for recycling here in the Bay Area alone. In California as a whole, there are more than 500,000 tons of discarded tires which could be reclaimed and put to use in another form. The normal routine is to take an old tire and to throw it away, usually at a dump site.

"This is sheer lunacy," chirps Dashwood. "Those tires represent fuel. There is oil in those tires." Dashwood has figures to show that four barrels of oil can be obtained from each ton of processed tires. That works out to 520,000 barrels of oil which could be obtained from the Bay Area's tires alone. "We wouldn't even need the Arabs at that rate," Dashwood says. Saying that represents a savings of about $25 million, Dashwood is convinced that this is the wave of the future. Private industry, working hand in hand with the government, has begun to take steps in that direction too.

At least two large firms, the Garrett Research and Development Company of La Verne, Calif., and The Oil Shale Corp. of Los Angeles, have pursued a method of breaking down old tires into components of carbon black, usable gas and oil. It is called pyrolysis and it involves intense heat without the introduction of oxygen. It is expensive. Pyrolysis plants cost into the millions of dollars. They are also used to break down other kinds of waste, besides tires.

Presently, there are recycling plants in operation in a number of American communities. Others are planned. Here are some of the more notable attempts at profiting from garbage:

• The State of Connecticut is committed to spending $300 million over a 10-year period to construct 10 privately run plants to retrieve the state's waste. The first plant, a pyrolysis facility, will cost about $30 million and it is expected to be finished in 1976. Connecticut's plan is the most ambitious effort in the nation so far.

• The small town of Franklin, Ohio, has been operating a $2.1 million plant for about three years. It disposes of trash and garbage and recovers usable materials in the bargain. The federal government's Environmental Protection Agency has financed two-thirds of the cost of this plant.

• The Union Electric Co. has planned to utilize an incineration plant in St. Louis to replace about 6 per cent of its total by 1977. The utility has contracted to take all the garbage from St. Louis and neighboring areas. It will sort and sell the metals to others, shred the combustible materials and burn them along with coal to create electric power.

• Furnaces are being used to burn garbage in places like Denver and Toledo, Ore. Plants in other cities are planned in the future.

In California, Garrett Research, a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum has begun construction of a pyrolysis plant. It is expected to be completed in 1976. It will have a capacity of 200 tons of garbage per day. Officials say that for every ton of garbage processed, a barrel of oil will be produced. The oil will be sold to the San Diego Gas & Electric Co.

The Bay Area has yet to get into the business of comprehensive waste management. However, interest is growing. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. had a study produced by Stanford Research Institute of Menlo Park which showed that nine pyrolysis plants could recover enough energy from this region's daily ration of trash (some 10,000 tons per day) to generate about 10 per cent of the area's electrical needs. SRI authorities believe that fuel created in this way would be cheaper than paying for Arab oil.

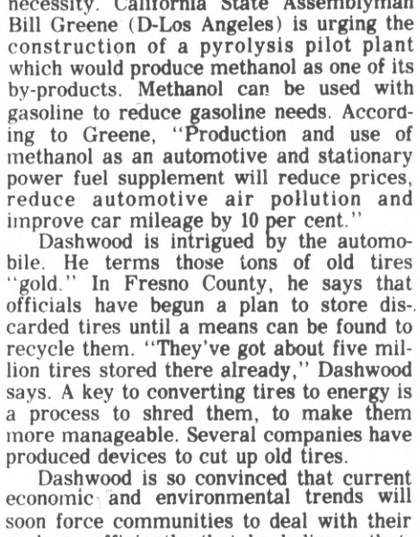
According to SRI's experts, garbage could provide about 15 per cent of the fuel needed by California's electric utilities — and considerable savings could result.

All of this excites people like Dashwood, who view these plans as a future necessity. California State Assemblyman Bill Greene (D-Los Angeles) is urging the construction of a pyrolysis pilot plant which would produce methanol as one of its by-products. Methanol can be used with gasoline to reduce gasoline needs. According to Greene, "Production and use of methanol as an automotive and stationary power fuel supplement will reduce prices, reduce automotive air pollution and improve car mileage by 10 per cent."

Dashwood is intrigued by the automobile. He terms those tons of old tires "gold." In Fresno County, he says that officials have begun a plan to store discarded tires until a means can be found to recycle them. "They've got about five million tires stored there already," Dashwood says. A key to converting tires to energy is a process to shred them, to make them more manageable. Several companies have produced devices to cut up old tires.

Dashwood is so convinced that current economic and environmental trends will soon force communities to deal with their garbage efficiently that he believes that, "Someday, it's very possible you will see your children digging up old tires and turning them in just like they did with pop bottles. We might even see the mining of old tires."

Says Dashwood, "Why not? There's oil in those carcasses." And today, oil is the magic word.



FRANK DASHWOOD
